the air, the ground stretching behim, a sodden, sloppy earth

But there was no sodden mass where Johnstone flew, though the clouds hung heavy above him, and gray mist enveloped him all around At the west end of the field he turned again eastward, settling himself for a landing. He had gone to an altitude of 500 feet, and the descent was easy. He glided down the stairless steep as a bird to its nest, and with level planes sank to the earth. The landing was soft. He had come back almost to his starting point. e people tried to break through the lines to greet him, but were checked. But they could yell, and they cheered the chilled aviator with lusty throats.

Nervy Exhibition. Johnstone went up at 3:47 o'clock and returned to earth at 3:52, having remained in the air exactly five minutes. Though the time was less than the contract time, the flight was counted because of the young aviator's plucky, venturesome spirit. The fair directors were satisfied, and the people were satisfied. Few have flown in the rain, and fewer still in such stormy weather, and Johnstone, trusting himself to God and his own nerve, had afforded the crowd a remarkable demon stration of aviation.

"I think that will satisfy them," he said. "I have demonstrated that the said. "I have demonstrated that the aeroplane can fly. But it was mighty had up there. The wind and rain cut into my face, and I could hardly see Water got into my motor and short-circulated one of the cylinders, and I was using only three cylinders. But it was all right. The machine was unfer perfect control, and I was safe."

Johnstone had done so well and had so completely satisfied the fair manage, ment and all the crowds who have gone out to see him that, in view of the storm and the trying ordeal for Johnstone, the directors decided to call off the second flight which had been scheduled. Johnstone could have flown and would have made a second flight had it been demanded of him; but both he and Mr. Jackson seemed relieved that he would not be asked to make a second demonstration under such trying conditions.

Like New Machine.

The aeroplane had been practically rebuilt, and had not been tried before the flight. Johnstone said afterwards that he was not quite certain of the machine, and that he tried warping both planes to see if they were in good condition before he ascended beneath the breast of the clouds. But the machine was in perfect order, and he will be able to fly it without further repairing. ther repairing.

"First time I ever saw an air machine." he said. "First time I ever believed in the thing. But I reckon I'll keep to the ground a while longer yet. Got a fine horse at home."

Everybody from the sodden filed around congregated about the tent, curious to see again the man who could fly and the thing he made to fly. Behind them the field was descreted. Trains of slow-moving wagons were haulin gaway the thousand and one things which go to make up a fair, and show folks were pulling up stakes and hauling down their tents. It was a desolate scene. Sad-eyed stakes and hauling down their tents. It was a desolate scene. Sad-eyed jockeys led away their horses, and cattle lowed mournfully as they ambled down the road to the waiting cars, There was hurry and bustle everywhere. "Like the carea that infest the day," the people "folded their tents like the Arabs and as silently table away." stole away."

And Then the Getaway.

And Then the Getaway.

There is nothing more pathetic than a moving army. And when the rain comes down, and the roads are ankle deep in mud, and the camp followers are drenched to the skin and chilled to the marrow, the scene becomes more mournful still. There were few words, but many regrets. Little money had poured anto the coffers of the show folk. Half-filled purses do not contribute to an air of cheerfulness, and new fields and new, guilible crowds, will be as welcome as the flowers in May.

Spielers and fakers stood gaunt and lonely in the deserting throng. They were forgotten as the things of yesterday. The gipsy children alone preserved their cheer around a crackling fire. Stockingless and shoeless, they

The workmen soon dismantled the machine, and after he had seen that everything was all right, Johnstone and his manager took up their things and departed for dinner and dry clothing.

Johnstone left at 11 o'clock last night for St. Louis, where he is to compate in the big meet of the Middle West on Monday. The aeroplane was of the aeroplane and its master.

THE FEAR OF HUMBUG.

Prevents Many People From Trying a Good Medicine.

Stomach troubles are so common and in most cases so obstinate to cure that people are apt to look with suspicion on any remedy claiming to be a radical, permanent cure for dyspepsia and indigestion, Many such pride themselves on their acuteness in never being humbugged, especially in medicines.

This fear ' being humbugged can be carried too far, so far, in fact, that many people suffer for years with weak digestion rather than risk a little time and money in faithfully testing the claims made of a preparation so reliable and universally used as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are vastly different in one important respect from ordinary proprietary medicines for the reason that they are not a secret patent medicine, no secret ja made of their ingredients, but analysis shows them to contain ' natural digestive ferments, pure aseptic nepsin, the digestive acids, Golden Seal, bismuth, hydrastis and nux. They are not cathartic, neither do they ace powerfully on any organ, but they cure indigestion on the common sense plan of digesting the food eaten thoroughly before it has time to ferment, sour and cause the mischief. This is the only secret of their success.

Cathartic pills never have and never can cure indigestion and stomach its really in the stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets taken after meals digest the food. That is all there is to it. Food not digested or half-digested is polson, as it creates gas, acidity, headaches, nalpitation of the heart, loss of flesh and appetite and many other troubles which are often called by some other name.

They are sold by druggists every.

CAVALIERI MAY SUE FOR DIVORCE

Tired of Matrimonial Bond, Which She Says Has Injured Her Professionally.

New York, October 8,-Lina Cavalieri, the pretty songbird to whom Robert Winthrop Chanler virtually signed over his entire estate of millions before making her his bride, it is declared by friends, is preparing to sue for a separation.

According to these friends, the grand opera star, who is wealthy in her own right, is "tired and sick of the whole affair," and is anxious to obtain her freedom from matrimonial bonds as soon as possible. She will, it is said base her suit on grounds of non-support, of violent treatment and behavior and incompatibility of tempera
